1. Corporate Talk That Says Nothing

You know those buzzwords like ‘synergize our paradigms’ or ‘leverage core competencies’? They sound fancy but often mean absolutely nothing. I wanted to poke fun at how we dress up simple ideas in ridiculous language just to sound important.

2. Productivity Tools We Don’t Actually Use

Apps like Trello or JIRA are supposed to help us work better... but let’s be honest, half the time we’re just moving cards around to look busy. Procrasti-Nator takes that illusion to the next level—no real work required!

3. Useless Websites That Are Weirdly Genius

Ever seen sites like PointerPointer.com? They serve no purpose... and that’s why they’re amazing. I wanted to capture that same playful absurdity, but for ‘productivity.’”

Key Features and Technical Highlights

- The Task Simulator lets you complete fake work with one click

The Task Simulator lets users fake productivity with one click—generating fake progress bars or auto-filled spreadsheets to mimic work.

- Our Meeting Tracker counts minutes wasted in imaginary meetings

The Meeting Tracker sarcastically logs hours wasted in pointless discussions, awarding badges for "Time Successfully Wasted."

- Panic Mode turns your screen red.

Panic Mode is the digital equivalent of screaming into a pillow—instead of discreetly hiding your distractions, it engulfs your entire screen in a dramatic, pulsing red glow.

Technical Highlights:

- Vanilla JavaScript
- HTML CSS
- C# API Calls
